

CREATING A GENERAL DEVELOPMENT PLAN

in partnership with San Diego Parks and Recreation

What is a General Development Plan (GDP)?

A General Development Plan, or GDP, is a document that details the plan and design guidelines to build a new public park.

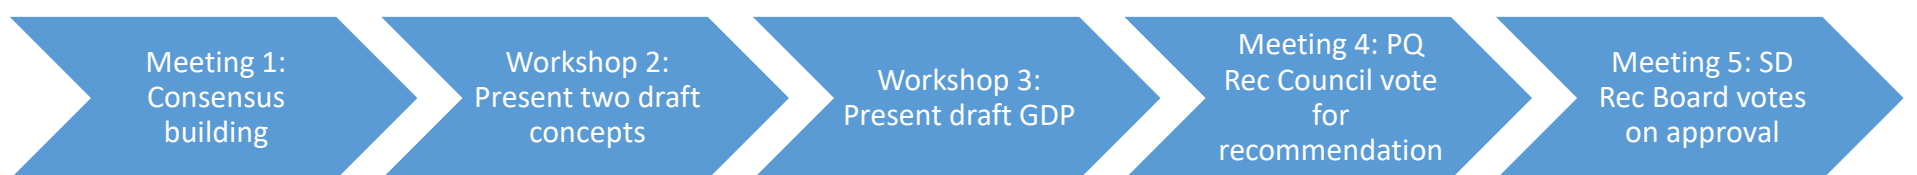

Why does The Junipers park need a GDP?

The City of San Diego requires a GDP for public parks. The new neighborhood park at The Junipers will be a public park.

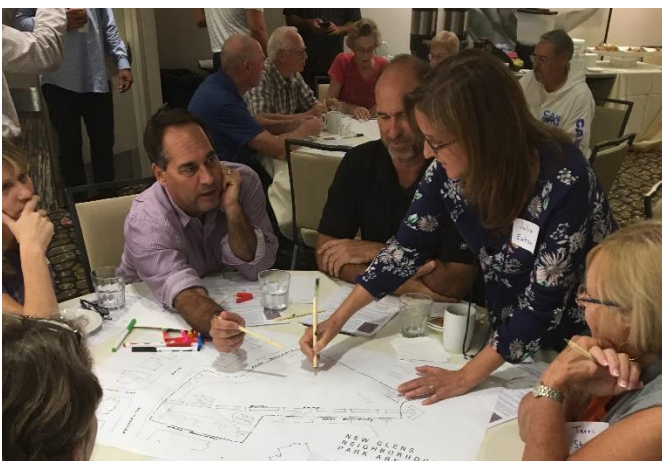

How does the GDP process work?

A GDP is created through a series of public workshops that collect, identify, and synthesize public input. The public workshops are held at the regularly scheduled PQ Parks and Recreation Advisory Council Meetings. Following recommendation from the PQ Rec Council, the City of San Diego Parks and Recreation Board will vote to approve the GDP. Once approved, the GDP will be part of the official project package which will be voted on by the City Council.

How do I get involved?

Attend and share your feedback! The workshops will be similar to the design charettes many of you participated in with 33North last year. The only difference is that the GDP process is a City-regulated process. Feedback collected at the 33North design charettes will serve as a jumping off point for the GDP.
